ED SUNDAY SCHOOL DEMONSTRATION

A meeting was held in connection with the St. Mary's Ladies' Aid society, which is having a bazaar at the city hall. There was a large attendance. An address was made by the president on the respective merits of colonial free trade and protection was after the initiatory business had been transacted, the speakers proceeded to discuss the question debated on both sides. On the question free was warmly advocated by Mr. J. B. Thompson, and protection by Mr. D. C. Thompson. The House was finally adjourned until a following Monday.

A large meeting was held in Harold's Rooms, Randwick, last night for the purpose of deciding as to what was to be done in connection with the proposed Temperance Association in Randwick, as it was deemed desirable that the interests of the temperance should be represented and defended in other parts of the colony. Mr. D. C. Thomas was voted to the chair. Mr. H. Holcomb was elected secretary. At some length, pointing out the benefits which the borough of Randwick would be likely to derive if the tem-

The borough council would then attend to business promptly, and not ignore them, as had been too commonly the practice. After the matter had been well discussed, it was resolved "That it is desirable that a Ratepayers' Association be formed in Renfrew, and Mr. D. A. Thomas act as secretary pro tem. It was also resolved that the petition be invited to be signed in the Town Hall on Friday next. The following gentlemen were asked to attend to the committee:—Messrs. James Middleton, A. Thomas, H. LADS' FESTIVAL AT THE NAT

A meeting of the Australian Academy of Arts was held on Monday evening at the Lyceum Theatre. The literary connection with the first exhibition of the year made by Mr. Fletcher Watson, president, showed that its receipts from visitors had been sufficient to pay the full expenses. The interest had continued to the end. The actual and potential value of the literature program were considered most cheering. Mr. Gladstone was elected a member, and votes of thanks were passed to those who had rendered help in connection with the undertaking.

In the borough of North Willoughby on Monday evening a public meeting of ratepayers was held to consider the present condition of municipal affairs. There was a large attendance, amongst others there were present: Messrs. T. Cochrane, C. Leary, R. T. Newell, the Rev. S. W. B. Hooper, J. H. Gifford, J. A. McCallum, J. M. Macgregor, Mr. B. C. Munro, Robert Small, I. E. Gray, W. Nicholson, W. C. Boske, and James Holston. Mr. Frank R. Trust was placed in the chair. The principal resolutions carried were (1), That the affairs of the council were being satisfactorily administered; and (2), That the Council of Messrs. W. F. Munton and John F. Landers should be supported for East Ward and River Ward respectively at the approaching February elections. The meeting terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

CENTENARY OR CENTENNIAL—WHICH?

memorial. It was also stated that A

Sir,—Notwithstanding what has recently been its more general use of the word Centennial, as applied to the approaching celebration of our first hundred years, I am one of many not unreflecting people who maintain that the say (or more correct and appropriate) term is Centenary. I venture to define this word as the proper one, for indicating the respective first hundred years of the American Revolution epoch, and the invested monosyllabic word "centennial" as applying to a commemoration in some century or centuries after the first. The latter word, being compounded of ing the ground from the first floor, the pedimental entrance, and the pair of columns which centum and centus, we may admit, can equally with the word centenary mean a hundred years; but it is as if we should say that the word century means a hundred years of time occurring every third or every seventh year. The old and genuine term is the Latin centesarius applied, which, although an adjective in the original, is in English used substantively only. It is thus found in Johnson's Dictionary:—"Centenary, a. consisting of a hundred." The accent (he observed in passing) has here marked, on the first syllable. The word centennial is not found in this, our highest authority on questions of language. In Johnson and Walker's Dictionary, 1875, the proposed word is not even mentioned. The following:—"Centenary, s. the number of a hundred. Centenary, a., consisting of a hundred years." From Bailey's Dictionary, 1848, the word centennial is absent. Centenary (the accent, as in all other examples, as in century) is the only word in the language which has the number of one hundred." In Chambers's Etymological Dictionary, 1891, we have the following:—"Centenary, n., a, a century, or one hundred years." Centennial is given thus:—"adj. Happening once in a hundred years." In Worcester's Dictionary, 1859, the following entries occur:—"Centenary, n., a century. The period of 100 years. Every period of one hundred years. Centennial, a. Occurring once in 100 years. Completing the term of 100 years." In Ogilvie's Imperial Dictionary, 1882, however, are the following:—"Centenary, n., the space of 100 years. The commemoration of any event which happened 100 years before. Centennial, e.g., happening every 100 years. Lasting 100 years, a centennial celebration is called a centennial. The word is used for the first time, both words are so to speak new modalities. Centenary is quoted as being equally an adjective, and centennial is elevated into a noun, and stated to be "commemoration of any event which happened 100 years ago, e.g., the centennial of the Declaration of Independence." Here we discover the source of the invention which I deprecate. People who "invent" a noun, and a table a motion, and talk of a man's sundering himself, may be pardoned for converting the invented "separation" into a verb, and the invented "sundering" into a noun, which the genuine "centenary" had exclusively before Australia or America existed. But there is a difficulty in their way. If "centennial" means what is thus said of it,

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD

It will have been observed that in all the dictionaries the accent or emphasis is placed, without exception (and, as I conceive, properly and emphatically placed), on the first syllable. The pronunciation pointed out to us, therefore, is extraordinary. It happens that in "centenarius" the second syllable is long, and so the pedants would have our second syllable, in its English dress, made long also. The word would thus become "centenary." Thence the transition was easy to "centenary" (supposed to be a corruption from some new Saitia's Calendar), and thence to the mistaken "centennial" whereby we shall be made to and 28th, while all their friends are enjoy-celebrate a second or subsequent centenary, before we have passed our first. I enter my humble protest against the innovation. We may rest assured that the great lexicographer knew both languages, Latin and English, as well as any men do now living; and if the pure Latin word had remained, as in curator (though Johnson, following the strictly the analogies, accentuates there the first, and not the second, syllable), we should not unwillingly have accepted the spondee and dactyl which cut up the cur. True, the third, as well as the second, syllable, in the Latin, is long. But our adopted English word, meaning one century of years, next following a given event, is not subject to the same rule of accentuation. The Latin centuriarius has its own rules of too great a favour, when you consider it only comes once in a person's life

THE PADDINGTON ELECTION AND LOCAL OPTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The late election is another argument for the speedy passing of a complete local option law, as it proves the drink question is a disturbing one in an area to which it does not properly belong. The matter as to the extension of a public-house is one that mainly concerns the locality —Will you permit me to point out the great benefit to employees of every grade—both in which it is, and should be decided there by the competing parties. It should be a simple and distinct issue, and not combined with other matters so to confuse with a clear decision. In Parliamentary elections it is mixed up with various questions of national interest, and is sure to cause a difficulty among parties until shifted to the neighbourhoods to which its settlement belongs by natural right.

There is little doubt also that the election proves that there are a considerable number of persons who are local opponents first and free-traders afterwards. It is probable that there are not so few who regard the bodies of local administration as more important than local

The return of the drain bill of the colonies which in 1806 was £5,121,000. They think with John Bright that "in every country you find the nation in the cottage, and if the light of your legislation will not shine in their eyes, the system is a failure, and your system a mistake." Persons with such views will not be easily set aside until their point is carried.

Why should not the Government at once introduce a bill to complete our local option system? The Assembly be affirmed by resolution all that the next session of 44 bills options desire, and by a large majority of 44 bills. Why not then at once clear the atmosphere of Parliamentary elections? The concession to the localities would be a small one, and highly beneficial change. It would be a great difficulty in our electoral contest, and may block the road to settlement of other very important legislative questions.

SYDNEY MORNING HERALD.

With a view of recording the progress made during the first century of Australian settlement, a SPECIAL SUPPLEMENT of the "Sydney Morning Herald" will be published on the 24th instant.

The Supplement will trace the growth of the various institutions of the colony, and will indicate their present position. Our System of Government, our Commerce, our Finances, and our Manufactures, the Land and the Labour Questions, the Civil Service, Art, Education, the strength of the various Ecclesiastical bodies, the development of the Newspapers, Press, and a large number of other topics, will be fully dealt with.

The Supplement will not be confined to New South Wales, but will set forth the leading facts in connection with the various colonies of Australasia.

Along with the Special Supplement the Proprietors of the "Herald" will present

As the pressure upon the space of the "Herald" is likely to be great, Advertisers are requested to send in their favours at the earliest possible date.

TO AGENTS.—To ensure supply of extra copies, it is necessary that early orders be sent to this Office.

Single copies sent direct from this Office, on receipt of name and address—throughout the Colonies, 2d.; to the United Kingdom, 3d.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

Our Special Summary for Europe will be published to-morrow for transmission by the Orient Company's steamer Oroya, the mail by which colonies, fast newspapers, at half-past 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Persons desiring to send to their friends copies of the Herald can have them posted direct from this office by forwarding the necessary addresses and a penny stamp in addition to the cost of each paper.

The English mails per Lusitania, dated London, 16th December, 1887, will be due to-morrow, the 19th instant, in time for delivery at about 2 p.m.

MR. PARNELL has given now advice to the Irish Government. He suggests that it would be politic to facilitate the passage of the Bill for the purpose of enabling the Government to discontinue the Unionist and Conservative English legislation. There would be certain to be a disagreement between Unionists and Conservatives, and an agitation could be got up for a reduction of the term for the payment of the judicial rents.

TAMWORTH, THURSDAY.
Mr. F. J. Gibbs, member for Newcastle, died this morning at Moomba, the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. John Gill, from intestinal disorder. He was ill for about a week. Medical aid was only called in yesterday, and was too late. The body is to be sent to Sydney by to-morrow's all train, and will arrive there on Thursday morning.

HOYD and KING are instructed by Mr. Walsby

The property is charmingly situated within convenient distance of the assured land, extensive his flock, containing a series of improved strains, including, besides, stables, poultry runs, breeding-houses, inclosed paddocks, and a large and commodious residence, which he stock at present consists of about 1500 heads, of which are the choicest and rarest varieties in Australia. Mr. Hope's record as a prize breeder is unequalled. He has received 150 first and second class prizes in Victoria, the Intercolonial Championship Medal, and upwards of £1000 in New South Wales.

There are contracts (which will be continued so long as the landers are engaged in the trade) for the supply of of poultry is retained) with some of the necessary supply of poultry and game amounting to upwards of £100,000, and this is capable of extension. The auctioneers would desire to call the attention of those who wish to enter into the poultry farming business on an extensive scale to this property. Appointments for inspection and purchase can be made on application to Mr. Walter Hope, 10, Victoria Farm, Cabramatta, Sydney; Messrs. Allen and Allen, 10, Phillip-street; or the auctioneers.
